He allegedly wrote 14,000 unnecessary oxycodone prescriptions.

Doctor arrested for allegedly writing thousands of unnecessary prescriptions

The doctor, 81-year-old Martin Tesher, faces up to 20 years in prison for a charge of distributing a controlled substance.

Johnny R Cockrell I take Oxycodone for lower back pain, have taken it for some years. I have been through all other treatments and nothing helped. This medication helps in reducing the pain. I only take it when I need it and when I don't I don't. I don't like taking any medication of any kind but, this works for me, everyone is different when it comes to medication.

Julie Mooney Its about time..but he will get out of it, you watch..Big Pharma is responsible for this. Nothing wrong with painkillers, they have a specific purpose...but addiction is addiction...and being a pill doc is nothing new...it just exploded...and so sadly in rural areas with extreme unemployment..I am sure they were targeted...

Jay Clements You cant arrest doctors for writing prescriptions or you will terrify other doctors of writing certain drugs. Doctors specialize. So a pain doctor will write lots of pain medicine. Either let them write prescriptions or don't.

John McCarthy Again, why not him practice medicine in prison. Save the taxpayers a bundle and reduce his sentence. A physician is a terrible thing to waste.

Judy Huurman Everyone is accusing the big pharma's of being at the root of the opioid epidemic, which, in part they are, but the doctors that continually prescribe these drugs are also a big part of the problem.

James Finch I have a doctor that really doesn't like giving out strong pain killers unless it's a severe pain issue, she usually just gives out Tylenol 3 w codeine or 800 mg ibuprofen.
